Difference between Windows 10 'Home & Pro"

Microsoft Windows 10 for desktop, the successor to Windows 8.1, comes in two versions: Windows 10 Pro and Windows 10 Home. This is a stark contrast to earlier versions of Windows, which came in as many as seven editions. Of the two editions, Windows 10 Pro, as you may have guessed, has more features. Unlike Windows 7 and 8.1, in which the basic variant was markedly crippled with fewer features than its professional counterpart, Windows 10 Home packs in a large set of new features that should suffice most users' needs. This begs the question, which among Windows 10 Pro and Windows 10 Home is the right version for you.

What do you get with Windows 10 Home

Windows 10 Home is the basic variant of Windows 10. It comes with a number of new features including the revamped Start Menu. The company decided to chop it off from Windows 8 three years ago, but on popular demand, this feature is making a return to the desktop operating system. You also get a full-fledged version of Cortana, the digital voice assistant formerly exclusively available on Windows Phone. Other than that, the Home edition also gets you features like Battery Saver, TPM support, and company's new biometrics security feature called Windows Hello.

What do you get with Windows 10 Pro

The Pro edition of Windows 10, in addition to all of Home edition's features, offers sophisticated connectivity and privacy tools such as Domain Join, Group Policy Management, Bitlocker, Enterprise Mode Internet Explorer (EMIE), Assigned Access 8.1, Remote Desktop, Client Hyper-V, and Direct Access.

There are other variants of Windows 10 as well like Windows 10 Enterprise and Windows 10 Student.

SPRING CREATORS UPDATE WHAT'S IN IT?

Microsoft's Windows 10 Spring Creators Update has been, (and will be) rolled out to users and has plenty of features including new fonts, redesigned keyboard settings page and faster pairing for Bluetooth devices. There's also the long-awaited Timeline feature which lists all previews of all your apps in chronological order, allowing users to quickly jump back to a previously used app. And the Microsoft Edge browser gets autofill cards, an enhanced reading view, clutter-free printing, and a new improved Hub View that displays more content. Elsewhere, Cloud Clipboard will allow Windows 10 users to copy items on one computer, and paste it on another. These new options will all be welcomed by Microsoft's army of loyal fans but there's another big bonus feature which could be hugely popular. Microsoft will now allow users to instantly delete all diagnostic data that the firm has collected on a device.

Note to our members:

It has been my pleasure over the many years to serve consecutively, from 1984, to 2018, in our Club several positions, including:

A-Team Leader, Secretary, Treasurer, Vice President, President, Sysop, Newsletter Editor and P.R.Person.

NOW I'm anxiously looking forward to serving in the MOST IMPORTANT POSITION:

Lord willing—see you at the next meeting, MAY 15th, at Apple Barrel's party room.
